

Feenix launches its #WereTheLast 2023 campaign this Youth Month

Feenix, a South African public benefit organisation that provides access to funding to registered university students is set to launch its #WereTheLast2023 campaign this June, preceding Youth Day on 16 June.

Image supplied

With the aim of encouraging a nationwide conversation, #WereTheLast2023 challenges the escalating costs of tertiary education, motivating everyone to reflect on the future of our society and the collective responsibility to support the nation's students. It is at this time that Feenix recognizes the urgent need for collaboration.

The campaign therefore poses the critical question: "What would South Africa become if the 2023 class were our last students ever?"

Through various social media channels, Feenix invites the public to share their thoughts on this crucial topic. By fostering dialogue and embracing a range of viewpoints, Feenix aims to bridge the gap and emphasise the shared commitment to propel the nation forward through the potential of its youth and students.

Cara-Jean Petersen, CEO of Feenix, stresses the importance of the #WereTheLast2023 campaign.

"There is no denying that our society is going through a tough time. There are so many other challenges that dominate the public narrative – such as inflation, load shedding, and political transparency. Within South Africa's social, political, and economic landscape, we need the standard to be lifted, but in order to do so a conscious investment in the future must be made today.

“Our campaign puts the need to invest in students squarely back in the public domain where it belongs to ensure that we are actively nurturing young talent that will be a part of the solution in bringing about sustainable change within our socio-economic, political, and environmental landscapes in the years to come. The risk to society is enormous if our students are left by the wayside, and this is why I believe this campaign is so important.”

Shaping the future of education in South Africa

Feenix encourages individuals and organisations to support the campaign by sharing their thoughts through video submissions on their views of what South Africa would be like if the 2023 class were the last students ever.

By participating in this critical conversation, you can play an active role in shaping the future of education in South Africa and encouraging the conversation that access to education should not be based on wealth.

However, supporting the campaign through video submissions is not the only way to make a difference.

Feenix's primary objective is to address the pressing need for education, particularly among "the missing middle" students. These talented individuals often face financial barriers that prevent them from accessing higher education or completing their studies.

By making a generous donation to Feenix, donors can directly contribute to enabling students to pursue their educational goals. This initiative empowers these young individuals to unlock their potential, opening doors to a brighter future for themselves and society.

Since its establishment in 2015, Feenix has been instrumental in connecting countless donors with deserving students, making a meaningful impact on their lives.

Feenix provides a direct channel for donors to contribute to the education of these talented individuals, facilitating their dreams and aspirations.

To donate and learn more about Feenix and the #WereITheLast2023 movement, please visit <https://feenix.org/>.

For more, visit: <https://www.bizcommunity.com>