The social media giant will rebrand its two top-billing apps to "Instagram from Facebook" and "WhatsApp from Facebook" (in case you didn't know these two were owned by the social network).

It's 'confirmed': WhatsApp will allow one account across multiple devices

As for the reasons behind the change: Facebook wants you to know it owns the two services. "We want to be clearer about the products and services that are part of Facebook," The Information was told by Facebook.

“ Both apps will feature the ‘from Facebook’ suffix on Apple and Google’s app stores ”

The name changes are pretty new for its social networking apps, but the “from Facebook” suffix is something that we’ve already seen with its Oculus VR product, and Workplace team management app.
